

Shiba's manifesto

Greetings, my name is Shiba and a reason why I am so persistent on becoming a member and why I would be an amazing candidate for the Milton Keynes youth council is my determination towards an idealistic outcome. Additionally, I am constantly adapting and compromising, which means I'm applicable to numerous different situations, bringing in aspects that will benefit the young people in Milton Keynes the most. My nourishing ability give genuine acknowledgement and determination to create effect will help bring the voices and thoughts of the youth alive. This will help me focus on bringing out others' potential they have within. To achieve this, I would like to create an impact where the youth have a great opportunity to coexist with other members of our great Milton Keynes community we have come to love and adore. I can achieve this outcome by using my effective communication skills to help build the youth council that has a greater effect on our community and the youth whilst working alongside the wonderful team that's already tackling these issues. For example, I have acquired these fundamental skills from working alongside a team of adults who provide free food to a group of people attending a religious festival, with my own school I tend to help peers with revision and being a member of the school council tend to follow the core values such as responsibility, respect, aspiration and resilience and some charity.

To implement these measures, I will fight to create more recreational areas where the youth can enjoy leisurely activities indoors during the horrible bipolar cycles of rain we endure yearly. I would like the council to take effect on this for our youth people as they affect their health. Now the youth struggle with stress, depression, loneliness and a plethora of issues and it needs immediate action, and I want to be at the fore front of it improving and building new facilities where its local and easily accessible with no costs to help give back to the community and help the community flourish into a vibrant flower. I want to implement and ensure a youthhood where we connect and love each other and be able to bring others up in terms of health physically and mentally. From a sports and educational point of view. As a teenager I've struggled myself trying to accomplish my goals in sports for example this is when I would not be able to go out due to harsh conditions or where the facilities were horrible and the good ones were either expensive or too far away, nowadays due to inflating prices and the inability to source money being under 16 as well as transport being a barrier. See today there's people who are hearing this and are either friends or strangers, but they can relate, I see the frustrations my friends face, such as playing basketball in a country where there is a lack of promotion, so children fall hopeless in front of these issues such as myself. I want others to not endure this, and I want to be the embodiment of everyone's thoughts and add a more exerting force into greatness such as modernizing the areas, so people aren't stuck in the cycle but benefit.

The impact of this should be on all youth and the coming generation, soon to positively affect the world as these members will be aspired by us, like older brothers and sisters. The youth should be a part of this broad prospect as we are the up-and-coming future generation. Such changes having positive impacts on us will only boost our society to thrive and allow everyone to benefit from each other equally. Yes, while there may be parents, teachers or older people within the community, the youth should serve as much as a priority as everyone else. It starts with me goes onto you and finishes with us. Come help me with this journey, embarking change and unity as we are the youth. It consists of me and you, and I'm not here to make a compelling story but create an enormous change to revamp youthhood.
